

I support the ARRL in totally EXCEPT for retention of any code testing. The FCC requested and received considerable input on the need, if any, for continued code testing in 98-143. In the R&O for 98-143, the FCC identified NO valid reason to retain any code testing...other than for the ITU treaty requirement still in effect at that time. The ITU treaty has ended the need for any code testing, and with that change, the FCC should end code testing also.
